

Figure S3. The box-and-whisker plot presents the distribution of average variant frequency for each coverage classification group. Haplotypes are separated based on mitochondrial genome coverage at 100X with complete, nearly complete (four or less positions below 100X), and incomplete (more than four positions below 100X) classifications.

